Record rainfall damages 50,000 acres of local farmland

Contributed by Janet Eckles, Deputy Ag Commissioner/Sealer, Kings County Department of Ag

California has been in a drought for so long that when the rain from the atmospheric rivers began, many were caught off guard. In previous years, annual rainfall has been below 10 inches. This year, however, we surpassed 10 inches only three months in. The last time we received anywhere close to this amount of rainfall was in 1998, where 8.68 inches of rain fell in the first three months of the year. Before that was in 1983, when 9.72 inches fell during the same period; this was also the last time we had substantial flooding.

With the rain comes a mix of emotions for the Central Valley's farming industry. Water allocations have gone up, so farmers who had projected allocations of zero will now have plenty to plant fields that may have otherwise gone fallow. On the other hand, those with farms or homes close to creeks, canals, riverbeds, and the lowest elevations in the county (Tulare Lake), must worry about levee breaks and flooding.

KCFB welcomes new directors to the board

By Amy D. Fienen

Kings County Farm Bureau's board of directors has welcomed two new directors: Julie Martella and David Kahn. The unique skillsets and personal knowledge of the local ag industry each one brings to the table will benefit the organization and its members.

JULIE MARTELLA

Julie Martella never aspired to be a full-time farmer, but when her husband, Jason Martella, passed away unexpectedly in 2017, the former elementary school teacher found herself faced with the task of keeping their farm going alone. While raising the couple's two daughters, Merribeth and Allison, she learned how to drive a tractor and got her pesticide applicator license. For three seasons, she ran the farm until an injury forced her to lease it out. Without the farm to keep her busy, the grief she'd been too busy to deal with caught up with her.

Martella started working with a widowed life coach who helped her not only deal with her grief, but showed her how to use it for good.

"I've been given a very unique charge in this world; I can use my experience to help people," she said. "I have allowed my grief to transform my life."

As a speaker for Soaring Spirits International, Martella travels around the country speaking to fellow widows on the struggles of widowhood and how to cope with them. Her website,

Julie Martella

navigatingwidowhood.com, includes links to her weekly blogs and podcasts, as well as resources and information on her coaching and mentoring services.

During the 20 years she spent farming with her husband, farming became near and dear to her heart. Martella is excited to see how she can help connect people with their food and the farmers that grow it as a KCFB director. Additionally, she's excited to bring more diversity to an industry that's traditionally been male dominated.

KCFB's workload dominated by flooding

By Dusty Ference, Executive Director

Dusty Ference

It will come as no surprise that flooding is the main topic of conversation and consumes most of the day in the KCFB office. We've handled more media requests in the last month than in a long time, and anticipate many more throughout the summer. The interviews have gone well, and I hope they are helping shed light on the situation.

Along with the media coverage, elected officials and regulators are paying extra attention to Kings County. Last month, KCFB represented its members at one-on-one and group meetings with members of congress, the California senate and assembly, Kings County, and the California Department of Food and Agriculture (CDFA). At many of these meetings, state and federal agencies have presented what their respective offices can offer to assist with natural disasters.

As a result of these interactions, KCFB and the Excelsior/Kings River Resource Conservation District (EKRCDD) have scheduled two grower workshops on May 10 and 17 focused on flood impacts. The intention is for growers to hear first-hand what options are available for disaster relief and to have an opportunity to ask questions of the agencies providing programs. You can expect to hear from the Farm Service Agency (FSA), Natural Resource Conservation Service (NRCS), CDFA, and the County of Kings. For more information, see the ad below. 🙌 any more, and we shouldn't be treated as such," she said.

DAVID KAHN

Born and raised in Hanford, David Kahn is a partner in Kahn, Soares & Conway, the law firm co-founded by his dad, Jan

Kahn. Kahn completed his undergrad studies at the University of Oregon and went on the graduate from Thomas Jefferson School of Law in San Diego.

He hadn't planned to spend his career at Kahn, Soares & Conway, but a summer internship turned into a permanent position. His practice focuses on agriculture law, natural resources and water law, corporate and business law, and real estate law. With the implementation of SGMA, much of his work has been with water associations, water districts, irrigation districts, mutual water companies, water advocacy groups, and groundwater sustainability agencies.

Civic organizations Kahn is involved with include the Kings Regional Health Foundation, the Hanford Education Foundation, the Kings Economic Development Corporation, the Kings County Bar Association, and Sound N Vision.

Kahn and his wife, Emily have three children: Grace, 14; Tucker, 12; and Tate, 9. All three kids are soccer players, as is Kahn, who plays on an indoor adult team.

He is looking forward to seeing how his expertise in ag and water law can serve KCFB during these times when water continues presenting a number of challenges.

"Agriculture is the backbone of our community and my practice, and I thought this was the best way to give back to agriculture and the community," he said. 🙌

PROPERTY TAX RELIEF AVAILABLE FOR FLOOD VICTIMS

Kings County Assessor-Clerk/Recorder Kristine Lee has announced property tax relief available through her office. Under Revenue and Taxation Code 170, the county assessor is allowed to reduce the value of properties affected by natural disasters if a claim for relief is filed within 12 months of the event.

Lee will be introducing an updated county disaster ordinance in the coming weeks allowing relief to be granted without a claim. In the meantime, property owners in flood affected areas are encouraged to file a claim and submit it to the county assessor's office.

Please provide details including the percentage of property under water, estimated area that may not be under water but can't be farmed due to seepage, crops that were planted before the flood, type of crops damaged or destroyed, issues with livestock, structural damage, well damage, etc.

The claim form can be found online at countyofkings.com/departments/general-services/assessor-clerk-recorder/assessor. Questions can be directed to the county assessor's office, (559) 852-2486.

HELP KINGS COUNTY ASSESS LOCAL FLOOD DAMAGE

Kings County is seeking assistance from the public to document damage resulting from the severe weather event that occurred during the 2023 March storms. This information will be used to assist in collecting consolidated impact information and will be provided to other state and federal agencies as they assess the damage. Please visit countyofkings.com/community/2023-flood to take the brief survey. 🗳️

In Kings County, rains have caused almost 50,000 acres of farmland to be damaged due to flooding and threatens another estimated 135,000 acres. Homes, vehicles and farming equipment have been lost due to flooding. These numbers are changing daily, with additional losses added daily. Some dairies have had to be evacuated, and poultry farms have lost flocks and potentially the use of facilities for the year or longer. Damage and loss estimates are staggering and will have an extreme impact on the local economy.

Kings County is the number one cotton production county in the state; this year it is estimated that 50% of the land cotton is usually grown on will be underwater or unfarmable. This is only one of the many crops growing areas that are being threatened by the flooding. Affected crops county wide include alfalfa, almonds, pistachios, cotton, safflower, pomegranates, grapes, corn, wheat, triticale, olives, oats, barley, Bermuda grass, pastureland, and tomatoes. Monetary losses attributed just to crop loss could be $300 million or more and come with much more expected in economic impacts. Unfortunately, the current flooding is not the end of it. These issues will press into the summer with snow melt as temperatures warm.

Flooding impacts are not limited to crop land or structures; this also affects the people who work those fields, the industry and entire economy of the area. Many agricultural employees may no longer have jobs, so workers that would usually be working the fields may have to look for work in other areas. The severity of the damage and its impacts will affect everyone in some way. Prices in the grocery store will most likely rise, unemployment rates will go up, creating a domino effect. Hopefully, warm weather will come in gradually this year and give us a chance to dry out and prepare for the next wave of water. 🗳️

First Member Appreciation Night was a success

By Breanna Larman, Executive Assistant

Did you hear the joke about the pop fly? Forget it, it's way over your head.

Kings County Farm Bureau members and sponsors made their way to Tulare County on April 26 to enjoy a night of fellowship at Rawhide Baseball Stadium. With the help of Mike Candela, Rawhide's co-general manager, we had an amazing, first ever Member Appreciation Night. We were excited to have over 800 tickets claimed for this event.

This quarter has been quite a success for membership. Being new to this roll, it has been a joy to connect with our members and Friends of Farm Bureau during renewal calls. So far, we have been able to renew over half of our quarter one (January-March) Friends of Farm Bureau and 94 members.

This month, KCFB partners with Excelsior/Kings

River Conservation District (EKRCDD) to hold flood disaster relief workshops. These two workshops will give growers and dairymen the opportunity to learn and ask questions about relief programs available to them. As we continue to stay informed on the latest flood information, we are working to facilitate solutions for those impacted. 🙌

THANK YOU to the KCFB members, supporters and friends who joined us for this fun evening and gave us the opportunity to express our appreciation for your continued support of our advocacy efforts.

KCFB awards four scholarships to graduating seniors

By Amy D. Fienen

As part of their ongoing commitment to supporting agriculture education and investing in the industry's future leaders, Kings County Farm Bureau awards scholarships to graduating high school seniors each year. Since the scholarship program's implementation in 2007, KCFB has awarded over $100,000 to more than 1,000 students. This year, four outstanding students are receiving scholarships of $1,000 each.

Scholarships are awarded to qualified students who plan to further their education at a two- or four-year accredited college, university or vocational institute and pursue a career in agriculture. The recipients are selected based on academic achievement, extracurricular activities, determination, leadership skills and a commitment to a career in agriculture.

Congratulations to the 2022-23 Kings County Farm Bureau scholarship recipients.

Landon Cardoza, son of Brian and Stacy Cardoza, is graduating from Hanford High School. He is currently undecided on what college he'll be attending, but is planning to major in farm and ranch management in hopes of becoming a goat farmer/breeder.

Anna Dooley, daughter of Ryan Dooley and Agnes Kepenyas, is graduating from Sierra Pacific High School. UC Davis is her first-choice college. She plans to study vet science and pursue a career as a veterinarian.

Isabella Mello, daughter of Bryan Mello and Amy Arevalo, is graduating from Hanford High School. She has been accepted to Oklahoma State University, where she plans to study animal science/pre-vet in preparation for a career as a large animal veterinarian.

Cayden Muir, son of E.J. and Carli Muir, is graduating from Hanford High School. He has been accepted to Boise State University, where he plans to study ag business to prepare for a career as an ag accountant.

Kings County Rural Crime Report

Obey road closure signs, avoid flooded areas

Contributed by Detective Dakotah Fausnett

Throughout the month of April, the Kings County Rural Crimes Task Force was busy investigating copper wire thefts, burglaries, tractor thefts and assisting with flood watch at the Tulare Lake and the Kings River.

We tracked down a stolen Kubota tractor that was stolen near Highway 41 and Fargo Avenue the week prior. There has been a rise in burglaries to shops and outbuildings in the rural areas. We encourage members to install security systems, cameras or motion lighting at these kinds of buildings to help deter thefts.

The sheriff's office has been diligently monitoring the Tulare Lake flooding in Corcoran and the status of the Kings River along the north side of the county. We urge everyone to obey all road closure signs and do not attempt to drive through any flooded areas. There have been several rescues by helicopter and by boat in the Tulare Lake due to subjects ignoring the road closures and driving on the flooded roadways. The Kings River is currently closed to all recreational activities, and individuals found on the river are being cited under authority of Penal Code 409.5(a). You can find information on flooding, road closures, maps and more at countyofkings.com/community/2023-flood.

It is imperative that if anyone knows of or hears of anyone buying or selling obviously stolen equipment to call the sheriff's office. If we do not receive calls from our Farm Bureau members and community, we may not be aware of certain crimes occurring in your area. If you have any questions, feel free to call me or any of our unit members at any time. 🙌
